

Dear FCC,I think that the issue of "number portability" misses the mark as on wireless vs. wireline competition. The only reason I have kept my land line at home is so that I don't have to race all over the house to find my cell phone when it rings.

If someone would come up with a way so that I could have extension cell phones (maybe a base unit docking station connected to the telephones in the house) I would promptly get rid of my land line.

Thank you!
